SECTION ONE: THE BIG PICTURE

Transforming Nations On The Foundations of Freedom, Sustainable Prosperity, and Justice

"Blessed is the nation whose God is the Lord." Psalm 33:12

Freedom, sustainable prosperity and justice are the legitimate goals of all nations and people groups. Elusive as these goals may be, the only pathway to them is clear long-term strategic thinking undergirded by a genuine ethic of "loving our neighbors as we love ourselves." The Statesmen Project is a movement committed to finding those who believe these simple truths and seek to address and redress their absence in a modern world.

We believe that in spite of many of Western Civilization's faults and injustices the reason it advanced and prospered unlike any other civilization in history is because it attempted to apply Judeo-Christian principles and values to its societies. While Greece and Rome added to its content, adherence to the ancient Jewish and Christian scriptures, and a faith in Jesus Christ's reality and teachings, drove Western Civilization's historic emergence. To deny this would be manifest historical revisionism.

Social, political and economic systems rest on their transcendent values and their practical application. We further recognize that Western Civilization today, both within itself and within the many cultures it has greatly influenced economically and politically, is seriously suffering as a result of either having misapplied these principles and values, omitted their application, or deliberately abandoned them. The West appears to be suffering a major loss of identity, and is living in and exporting to the world the complications of its own identity crisis.

The men and women who are the founders and mentors of The Statesmen Project, both commonly and individually, believe that the only real solution to the crises now challenging sustainable economic growth is to infuse those proven successful Judeo-Christian principles and values into our nations, states, and cities. Only then can we realistically expect sustainable freedom, justice and peace. The answer to most of our challenges is to identify the transcendent values and principles that can "re-set" and restart us together once again. We believe that these two fundamental truths are critical to our common welfare:

- 1) The only answer to the social concerns of racism, classism and solvable poverty is to treat all humans as valued because they have a common Creator.
- 2) No political theorist has better or more effectively stated the foundations of a just and prosperous society than Jesus when He commanded us to personally give ourselves over to the God of all truth, and to love our neighbor as we love ourselves.

These are supreme principles for relationships, and they also serve as the ultimate foundations upon which to base the laws, policies, and culture of a nation.

We see an inevitable "Great Re-Set" coming. We believe that the best way out of the Great Re-Set is to distinguish root causes from mere symptoms (i.e. root cause analysis) and close the gaps between what a society says it believes in and what it actually does. Ideas have consequences. Without a critical analysis of the values and principles undergirding the ideas being advanced or practiced for societies results in obstacles to productive political dialogue that produces wisdom and progress towards sustainable prosperity and justice.

Building a Global Movement of Statesmen in a Time of Social-Economic Crisis

"If the foundations are destroyed, what can the righteous do?" Psalm 11:3

The Statesmen Project is an international movement of concerned citizens responding to the growing economic and social crises with practical Biblical principles that solve specific community and national problems. We are a group of men and women seeking to rise above self-interest and politics as usual as we serve and assist our communities and nations navigate out of these crises.

Many citizens have lost confidence in the current political process to resolve the crises and are looking for the best approach to build societies of sustainable economic prosperity, justice and peace. We are very deeply concerned for our children, their children, and what we are passing on to them. We see that the current inheritance we are offering them is largely unacceptable: debt, dependency, gross government waste and significant numbers of people being economically left behind. These are a legacy of failure. Trapped in ideological grid-lock, encased in short-run thinking and expediencies, the global dream of greater freedom and upward economic mobility has both stalled and seems increasingly unreal to the emerging generations. We believe that it is a moral mandate that an elevated dialogue must come forth that transcends the current ones now revealing their obsolescence.

Our nation needs true statesmen. This type of man or woman is not merely a politician governing according to the interest groups that elected her/him. Instead, statesmen advocate policies using clearly stated principles calling upon citizens and elected officials alike to measure out decisions that are best for the most people rather than best for them.

The Statesmen Project is a prophetic voice calling people and nations to measure their personal and social choices by principles, results and sustainability. We seek to promote the application of time-tested principles proven to be successful in maximizing sustainable prosperity to the largest number of people. We are seeking to partner with others who see the social and economic crises growing within our nation and want transform our nations out of the crises.

Below are our description of what we have assessed and our strategies to address these problems. We finish with our perception of the criticality of the mandate before us.

The Problems as we see it:

- National, state and local governments are being defunded, attempting to meet needs they are not called to meet, and spending resources that more properly belong to future generations. This defunding will create major social needs locally as lowered revenues continue to impact city, county and state funds. Social services identified as viable will be discontinued completely or severely reduced.

- Over the next decades the U.S. civil government debt, combined with the unfunded liabilities and contractual commitments of cities, states and businesses will total well over $100 plus trillion. The inability of these governments and organizations to meet these expectations and commitments has (and will increasingly) place great tension between citizens, governments, and businesses. Confrontations will ensue until expectations match the reality of meeting those expectations.
- Nations are increasingly divided culturally and politically with stalemate and brinkmanship politics adding to our already existing polarization.
- Governmental leaders have few effective long-term answers; short-term answers are both politically unpopular and woefully shortsighted. Disenchantment with leaders and public protest are on the rise in many nations and U.S. communities. Violence is on the rise internationally between factions fighting for control of governments. Prolonged violence is growing and many nations appear headed towards anarchy or severe government control.
- A growing host of experts see that a global economic meltdown is a potential reality depending upon how the European Union, the United States and China handle the massive debt problems.
- The influence and importance of Judeo-Christian values are misperceived, marginalized, and lacking credibility with the general public and those in positions of public policy leadership.
- The net of all of this is that there is expanding hopelessness among a growing number of citizens and potentially destructive disillusionment.

The Causes of the Problems:

Nations are becoming ever more entrenched and enslaved by non-Biblical thinking and practices that are having disastrous effects on their people and social systems. This commitment to “radical secularization” is promoting the building of economies and governments that are increasingly based on the value of self-interest, greed and blame-game divisiveness. Contributing to this problem are the following dysfunctions:

- The left-right/liberal-conservative political interactions continue to produce no effective leadership and solutions.
- Those that follow Biblical principles and values are not actively involved in presenting these answers or actively engaged to be the “salt and light” of social systems. The consequences are societies becoming ignorant of the love-based values that promote freedom, sustainable prosperity, justice and peace.
- National and local leaders are not driven by principles and what is best for future generations but by politics, public perception, re-election, the demands of “special interests”, and short-term thinking paradigms.
- Elected officials and influential leaders of many countries are “medicating” their citizens through the centralization of power into civil governments and away from the private citizen, the deception of the truth, ineffective public education, moral-less entertainment, and the promotion of materialism and consumption. Most citizens have become apathetic and ignorant. Citizens are losing their ability to evaluate and think clearly, to choose wisely based on greater good principles, and to elect officials who can lead for the betterment of their jurisdiction instead of for re-election.

- Governments have directed much of their energy to redistributing tax collections to social services instead of promoting market and social entrepreneurship, capital investment and job creation.

The Opportunity and Our Purpose:

As a result we have a profound shortage of statesmen-like leaders and increasingly apathetic and ill-educated citizens. This is a time of both great danger and great opportunity. With looming failures in the structural stability of the economy and the network of social services, those that follow Biblical principles and/or Jesus, and those generally aligned with his love your neighbor teachings, have an opportunity to provide specific solutions to these needs, serve the people, and demonstrate that God loves people and has provided the answers for sustainably prosperous and peaceful communities. We are strategically and energetically advocating that those who believe in Biblical principles become prepared to seize the moment. The Statesmen Project is an impassioned response to bring God's ways into the crises and to reposition the perception of God and his influence within the general public conversation and the public policy decision-making process of the nations and local communities.

The purpose of The Statesmen Project is to partner with, and help prepare, people who are willing to respond to the social needs and crises by lovingly applying Biblical principles. We plan to actively participate in national and local public policy, and to support those efforts with widespread prayer. We also expect to shine a light on successful models. We hope to elevate the way citizens and an electorate think in order to impact the thinking and actions of their elected officials and other people of influence. The value we hope to create is the preparation and promotion of citizens to demonstrate and apply God's ways for creating social-economic systems that reflect God's deep love for people. By accomplishing these tasks, we will contribute to the proof of God's relevance in shaping societies towards freedom, sustainable prosperity, justice, and peace.

Our Trust In Jesus and the Providence of God:

We believe that we are intended by God to play a unique role in His work in partnership with Him. Those who have joined The Statesmen Project to date have expertise in applying Biblically-based principles in the fields of public policy, economics, banking and currency systems, city and social systems transformation, education and curriculum development, and management. We seek to join ourselves with other people who are applying Biblical principles – whether they know that they are applying them or not - to complement each other and collaborate on how to disciple the nations on the ways of God for managing His creation.

We are driven by the vision that informed citizens will rise up and seize this critical moment to deliver the great news of the supreme ways of God as it relates to the management of communities, social systems, and nations. We see the potential that nations will be strengthened by the increasing presence of love-based community leadership and governance, and that the values and principles of the Bible will be welcomed at all levels of public policy decision-making.

The Strategies of The Statesmen Project:

- Discover like-minded leaders and concerned citizens and invite them to join, and bring their wisdom and initiative to the movement.
- Link and enhance existing principle-based community services and prayer networks.
- Uncover community models that are proving the practical truth of Biblical principles and love-based values for community and national sustainable economic prosperity, justice and peace.
- Mobilize the best policy strategists to intelligently prepare for very meaningful public debates to effect real change.
- Prepare courses on the Biblical approach to social issues to educate and equip citizens to provide the leadership necessary to practically respond to the current crises in their communities and nation.
- Extensively utilize all relevant forms of media to tell the story of how Biblical principles are meeting social needs successfully on multiple levels to enhance the public's appreciation for the role of Jesus and his commands in society.
- Support this work through dedicated, experienced, effective strategic prayer.
- Start first in the U.S. then share with other countries what we have learned.
- Respond to The Lord's directions along the way.

The Objectives of The Statesmen Project:

- Teaching and modeling Biblically-based solutions to socio-economic needs.
- Creating environments/conversations/connections where leaders can gain insight and traction.
- Connecting people for strategic prayer for our solutions.
- Uniting citizens and citizen groups who are aligned with Judeo-Christian principles and values.
- Discovering and promoting solutions and models that are working.
- Changing the perceived value of the God of the Bible in culture.

The Critical Mandate of The Statesmen Project:

As members of The Statesmen Project we believe that our mandate is to:

- Provide an accurate diagnosis of the current economic, political, and social situation. We must powerfully communicate the current cultural suicide of creating a secular culture that attempts to disconnect itself from the Biblical values and principles that have proven historically to be the foundations of many successful nations.

- Proclaim and educate on the Biblical principles, values, applications, and models/proof points that have been historically successful.
- Call for open discussions and prepare for an anticipated global debate. Without a free flow of ideas in the context of democratic expression we will be increasingly unable to roll back the abuses of misused power, the loss of personal freedoms, and increasing government centralization and dependencies. We believe that the need for a global dialogue about the relationship between freedom, sustainable prosperity, and justice - and the spiritual/moral foundations supporting them - has reached a critical state.
- Encourage people that despite the great challenges we face now and ahead of us these crises do not need to render us hopeless. There is reason for great hope. We have hope because there are answers that have proven to work in history. People who have applied the principles of "loving our neighbor as themselves" in the past have achieved sustainable prosperity, freedom, and justice.

We increasingly believe that The Statesmen Project is a response for "such a time as this." We trust that all who see these realities will respond with courage, wisdom, commitment, tenacity, and love.

The Structure of The Statesmen Project:

Volunteers do almost all of the work of The Statesmen Project. The Statesmen Project is guided by a Strategy Board and led by an Executive Team. The members of The Statesmen Project are separated into Focus Groups:

- Community Transformation
 - Ecclesia Prayer
 - City Action Councils
 - Citizen Education
- Public Policy
 - Banking and Currency
- Intercessory Prayer
- Communications and Media

GoStrategic (formerly Strategic Christian Services) is facilitating and administratively supporting The Statesmen Project. GoStrategic is a non-profit ministry that has been educating Christians with the Biblical perspective on business, economics, public policy, and living since 1979. GoStrategic's mission is to disciple nations by training leaders and those they influence to inject Biblical values and principles into their culture and their social systems. Expenses for The Statesmen Project are funded through tax deductible donations to GoStrategic, designated for The Statesmen Project, and are very gratefully received.

The “Great Re-Set” and the Coming Global Debate

Many people who are aware of The Statesmen Project have asked us:

- “How bad or severe will the next wave of economic challenges be and how will it affect our nation, communities and people like me?”
- “What will trigger the next big downturn and when will it start?”

Most of us respond with answers similar to this: “God alone knows the answer to those questions”. Inevitably the next question arrives at “What should I do to prepare?” The Statesmen Project is working diligently on how to answer that question. Here is what we have assessed:

- The foundations of our economy are still fragile and unsustainable relative to the level of indebtedness. In fact, as a result of the worldwide “quantitative easing” of national central banks there is far greater indebtedness in 2015 than there was in 2007.
- The economy has not substantially changed from the “Great Recession” of 2008 and our true unemployment and underemployment rates are well beyond the public figures.
- There is a growing sense of diminished opportunity for everyone but the most wealthy or well connected, and along with it a growing sense of pessimism among people.
- The political system is still in gridlock, unable to deal with our core problems on anything other than superficial stop-gap measures.
- The international economic realities and political conflicts are worse than in 2008.
- The economy is being propped up via debt and currency systems that could collapse via any one of several different and hard-to-predict “trigger points”.

We are praying for adequate time to clearly work through the appropriate principle-based solutions, prepare curriculum to educate those who are interested, and find the right leaders who can help leverage appropriate constituencies and synergize effective solutions and wise policy.

We believe that when the next wave of economic crises hit it will do at least six things:

- 1) Make obvious that we need new leaders and policies on every level.
- 2) Require both short-run and long-run stabilization of law and order as well as necessitate the re-building of faith in the economic systems.
- 3) Stimulate a highly charged national and international debate – what we are calling the “Global Debate” - regarding capitalism, monetary policy, democratic forms of government, and their management of our political-economic systems.
- 4) Pressure responsibilities away from centralized, inefficient government to more local forms of government and community.
- 5) Create real dangers of radical, untested ideas and demagogue leaders rushing in to fill the vacuum created by failed policies and systems.
- 6) Offer Judeo-Christian values and principles an opportunity to replace the values of the radically secularized society we are currently experiencing - if we are prepared to act wisely.

Simply stated, we believe that major historic dangers and opportunities are in our near term future. We believe that the most promising future belongs to those nations, states and communities who are prepared to align themselves with the instructions of God and His desire to have us love our neighbors as ourselves.

The kind of pervasive cultural dialogue required to be constructive in this kind of crisis can only take place where freedom of speech and conscience are celebrated rather than tolerated, people seek to understand and not just proclaim, and honest disagreement stimulates genuine self-examination. This kind of “reality politics” leads to a deeper analysis and discussion of the core values of personal and social responsibility and how they might apply to the entire social community.

Here are some examples of the kinds of questions “reality politics” may generate:

- 1) Does our current educational system teach and re-enforce our founding values and explain how our founding documents and governing system are designed to implement them? If not, why?
- 2) Are the political and economic power sources of our society practically committed to the balance of walking out of the “me” (the individual) and the “us” (community) principles? If not, how should they best be confronted?
- 3) Are the financial and professional systems within the private sectors of society properly regulating themselves with these values or are they looking to civil government as their primary regulators? If so, why have they put that responsibility chiefly on civil government?
- 4) Can any citizen who is pulling their own weight economically, ask someone else who isn't, the question, “Why should I support your chosen lifestyle?”
- 5) Can citizens approach people or institutions of wealth and success with similar questions, such as, “How are you using your success to empower others within our community?”

The list could go on and on. The point is this: a fierce and crucial debate will soon be ignited and the “Great Re-Set” will flow out from the results of that debate. Effective, concentrated and specific prayer for this whole process is desperately needed now. That is something all of us can and should do.

SECTION TWO: TEN MASTER PRINCIPLES FOR SUSTAINABLE FREEDOM AND PROSPERITY

We believe that one of the major reasons that both our political and economic systems are unable to make any appreciable progress is because clear, identified, and consistently applied principles are either absent or wrongly applied. What are guiding us instead are political maneuvering, unprincipled pragmatism, and special interest group favoritism. One of our Founding Fathers, James Madison, carried deep concerns over our nation being divided and run by competing factions. This fear has become a reality in recent years.

The “Great Re-Set” will, by necessity, eventually force nations to turn to principle-based policies where results, not rhetoric, validate their virtue. As a principle-based movement, we contend that major amounts of current political-economic policies rest upon undisclosed principles, motivations for personal advantage or no discernable principles at all, we want to challenge what is and advocate what should be. Listed below are over-arching principles that we believe offer the best real time validation by the results they will produce.

We are organizing and advancing our policy course corrections based upon Ten Master Principles.

| TEN MASTER PRINCIPLES FOR SUSTAINABLE FREEDOM AND PROSPERITY |
| 1. Transcendent Values: The recognition of primary, fundamental and widely adhered to ideas and beliefs that define, limit or interpret all lesser values and which serve to create unity for a group of people and guide their behavior. Examples: Christ’s definition of “the Greatest Commandment”; the Ten Commandments; the U.S. Constitution; the Hippocratic Oath for medical professionals; the Code of Conduct of the U.S. Military. |
| 2. Self – Government: The internalization of laws, requirements, disciplines, beliefs and values such that one enforces within him/herself obedience to those standards of conduct. Examples: internal will or discipline v. external force; New Testament internal obedience from a “new heart or new spirit” v. Old Testament commandments; internal compulsion v. external force; people acting on their own v. coercion. |
| 3. Service-Based Power: Service-based power is the use of both authority and power to enhance the value, skill-sets, resource-base and capacities of those under the authority of a person or organization. Christ Himself is exhibit “A” of one embodying and exercising this unique use of power (Philippians 2:3-11). It is the deliberate use of authority and it’s associated power to serve those under the authority to help people help themselves to act in compliance with the group’s values rather than just use authority and power to force compliance. |

4. Nuclear Family: the organized and structured relationships of blood-line natural families (or adoptions) whose primary functions are the reproduction and raising of children within their structure, including the entire process of provision, protection, training and character development. Healthy nuclear families lay the foundation for relational healthy children and adults, self-government, self-provision and assimilation into the wider elements of culture (i.e. schools, organizations, employment, citizenry, etc.)

5. Jurisdictional Government: The five different forms of human government described in the Bible to govern society. These five different governmental forms are inter-related, have clearly established boundaries, and were created to maximize efficiencies (the division-of-labor), minimize the abuse of power (the separation of governmental powers); create specific responsibilities and function; and allow diversities of gifts/talents and influence to shape both individuals and society at large. The Biblical jurisdictions/governmental forms are: 1) self-government, 2) family-government, 3) ecclesiastic government, 4) corporate-financial government outside of the family realm, and 5) civil government.

6. Localism: The practice of pushing decision-making and provision down to the lowest level where people or organizations are actually living and practically responding to current needs and challenges (e.g. onsite). Localism is based on the notion that those closest to issues are best equipped to handle them. It results in the empowering of people living the reality of situations to deal with them based on first-hand observation and assessment. Localism is in contrast to centralism where key decisions are made for people in diverse locales by one central body far removed from actually living the needs and challenges.

7. Limits: The recognition that limits both protect us from harm and protect us from harming others. Well-defined limits take into account different capacities, gifts, training, motivations, needs, challenges, jurisdictions of authority, etc.

8. Justice – Equality: Justice is the concept that people are rewarded or punished as a result of their own specific actions and the rewards or punishments are correctly and appropriately applied using a commonly accepted standard. Equality is the concept of treating all people equally through the establishment of common rights, responsibilities, and opportunities without privilege or discrimination for certain groups. Justice deals with receiving what is one's proper due, equality deals with everyone receiving the same treatment.

9. Results-Based Policies: The belief that theories, ideas, programs or actions should be tested and then evaluated based upon factual results rather than hopes, bias, projections or ideological paradigms. If the known variable factors have been properly tested the results should be allowed to "speak for themselves". Policies are then either applied or discarded based on the factual results.

10. The Bridge of Trust: All successful, healthy mutual relationships - be they personal, organizational, national or international - are held together by trust between the parties. The trust can be evaluated by what pressures and challenges those relationships can withstand and remain intact without becoming "broken". The "bridge of trust" is a model for understanding how trust can be built and broken between people; a bridge can be a safe passageway of interaction between two parties or become broken preventing successful engagement.

As many of us remember from studying math or science, equations or the results of experiments are frequently analyzed on the basis of axiomatic truths. These truths can then be extrapolated into corollaries or derivatives. For example, some scientists have maintained that all the knowledge we have regarding the nature of matter is bound up in three primary axiomatic laws: gravity, thermodynamics and electro-magnetism. The application of axiomatic truths can also be applied to ethics, relational integrity, social building principles and economic applications.

To be effective principles need to be structured applications of the values they represent and then processed into policies that meet the real needs of nations and their people. Stated another way, The Statesmen Project is following the spiritual-social equation of:

Values into Principles + Policy Applications = Potential Transformation

The search to identify these kinds of axiomatic principles must be prepared for the “Great Debate” in order to be processed into policy application to eventually be used in the transformation of the “Great Re-Set”. The major challenge then becomes how do we get this equation operable in pluralistic societies; especially where “post-modern” thinking challenges objective truth?

To provide wise answers to the current and growing crisis we start with root cause analysis by breaking the general challenges of our crisis into the specific axioms or corollaries driving them. Once the causes are identified qualified people who are willing to work in a team are needed to prepare the principles for application. From there the principles must be prepared for serious discussion.

The inability to correctly diagnose the cause-effect principles of any situation lead to repetitive failure, false and wasteful “solutions”, discouragement, and ultimately, chaos or destruction. Cause-effect analysis requires axiomatic-corollary knowledge. Without this kind of analysis the nations are frequently rudderless in terms of how and why they are acting, advocating and legislating as they now are. We must wonder how many of our nation’s leaders are competent to lead based upon this reality?

Here are the Ten Master Principles with their corollaries:

| TEN MASTER PRINCIPLES: Axioms & Corollaries | |
| AXIOMATIC PRINCIPLE: | COROLLARIES: |
| 1. Transcendent Principles or Values: The recognition of supreme principles or values that define, limit or interpret all lesser values such as Christ defining “the Greatest Commandment”; the Ten Commandments which undergird all other lesser laws; the Constitutional laws which measure and define all lesser laws; the supreme values of an individual, organization, or nation which defines its supreme, core values and principles holding it together; the prioritization of importance or standing above all other consideration. | Citizenship, case law and legal systems, axioms with corollaries, spiritual law over natural law, immigration policy, voting rights, educational curriculum |

| 2. Self – Government: The internalization of external laws or requirements so that one enforces within themselves obedience to laws or principles others, or societies or organizations may have imposed from within; internal will or discipline v. external force; Old Testament commandments v. New Testament internal obedience from a “new heart or new spirit”; internal compulsion v. external force. | The lessening of oversight and efficiencies of all external laws; reduction of policing, crime, drugs, dependencies, character, focused energy and efficiencies, “staked tree” principle, impartation-discipleship |
| 3. Service-Based Power: Authority is bestowed by those having it to someone or some group to oversee and require compliance to a specific set of actions; power is the specific use of force to insure compliance. The policeman’s badge represents his given authority and his gun represents his power to insure compliance. Service-based power is specifically the use of both authority and power to enhance the value, skill-sets, resource-base and capacities of those related to and under the authority of those exercising service-based power. Christ Himself is exhibit “A” of one embodying and exercising this unique use of power (Philippians 2:3-11). | Empowerment v. self-centered gain, organizational-relational “climate”, obedience v. loyalty, relational leverage, love v. authoritarianism |
| 4. Nuclear Family: Primarily the organized and structured relationships of blood-line natural families (or adoptions) whose primary functions are the reproduction of children within their structure and the entire process of provision, protection, training and character development so as to lay the foundation for relational and healthy, self-government, self-provision and cultural assimilation into the appropriate wider elements of society and civilization. | Generational momentum, stewardship- management , parenting skills, educational responsibility and systems, male-female issues, fatherhood, motherhood, economics (oikos) Gen. 12:3 |
| 5. Jurisdictional Government: The biblical model, by explicit referencing, of the five differing sets of human government required to govern society so as to maximize efficiencies (the division-of-labor), minimize the abuse of power (the separation of governmental powers); create specific responsibilities and function; and allow diversities of engiftment and influence-shape both individuals and society at large. These five inter-related forms of government are: 1) self-government, 2) family-government, 3) ecclesiastic government, 4) corporate-financial government outside of the family realm, and 5) civil government. | Division of labor, separation of power, jurisdictional problem-solving and finance; decentralization, redundancies, mutuality, edification jurisdictional organization of the legal systems; welfare policy |
| 6. Localism: The practice of pushing decision-making and provision down to the lowest on-site level of where people or organizations are actually living and practically responding to current needs and challenges; pressing and empowering people closest to the reality of situations to deal with them based on first-hand realities; the notion that those closest to issues are best equipped to handle them. | Centralism v. localism; authoritarianism v. self-empowerment, duplication and redundancies; inefficiencies through bureaucracies; legal and welfare injustices; the Old Testament “poor tax”; Federalism v. States’ rights; taxation policy; division of labor, mandated Federal spending |
| 7. Limits: The recognition that limits both protect us from harm and protect us from harming others; the recognition of different capacities, gifts, training, motivations; differing jurisdictions of authority, etc. | The governmental separation of powers; tyranny; division of labor; law of diminishing returns; banking, currency, leverage limits; taxation policy; laws in all forms; presumptuous sin; foreign policy; environmentalism; sustainability |
| 8. Justice – Equality: “Justice” is the concept that people are rewarded or punished by virtue of their own specific actions, inputs and contributions to a given situation, whereas, “equality” deals with the concept of equal rights, responsibilities, opportunities, applications of laws common to everyone; Justice deals with receiving what is one’s proper due, equality deals with everyone receiving the same treatment. | Taxation policy; criminal law; special-interest inequalities; racism; sexism; unequal wages; entitlements; exploitation; systemic injustices |
| 9. Results-Based Reality: The recognition that theories, ideas and programs and actions must be evaluated and applied, or discarded based upon actual results rather than hopes, theories, projections or ideological paradigms. Once the known variable factors have been properly tested and applied, the results speak for themselves and “ideas” must be submitted to facts. | Ideologies; religious concepts; economic, social, environmental, theory of all sorts; political parties; scientific method; self-interest and delusion |
| 10. The Bridge of Trust: All mutual relationships, be they personal, organizational, national or international, are held together and measured by what pressures and challenges those relationships can withstand and remain intact; therefore this “bridge of trust” is the most fundamental measurement between people and the systems that hold them together and must be guarded as the ultimate bonds of unity. | Organization; unity; personal relationships; national trust in political, economic and legal systems; contracts of all sorts; scale of action related to competency and character |

The Statesmen Project is currently using the Ten Master Principles and the corollaries as analytical tools to measure and assess the viability and sustainability of both current and proposed public and economic policies. We are plan to use them to educate citizens and leaders in terms of public logic, usage, results and compatibility with their stated Founding Documents and publicly articulated values.

The usage of these principles is self-evidently valuable to analytical thinking and policy analysis. However, unless and until they are specifically applied to government policy usage, and candidate and administrative vetting, they will remain “academic” and the nations will remain in confusion, stagnation and social division. Political education, rather than political rhetoric, is near the very top of our nation’s most critical needs. That requires reform of our nation’s educational systems and rigorous social debate. We need the quick awakening of our populace from denial, “numbness” regarding the political process and a large amount of accurate and penetrating prayer.

In Matthew chapter 28 Jesus directs his followers to:

Therefore, go and make disciples of all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father and of the Son and of the Holy Spirit, and teaching them to obey everything I have commanded you. And surely I am with you always, to the very end of the age.

-Matthew 28:19-20

Successfully making disciples of nations requires converting individuals, who as citizens of their nations, begin to apply biblical teachings and principles to the culture and social systems in which they live. Unfortunately, too many Christians think, vote, and influence others more as liberals or conservatives than as Christians seeking to apply scriptural principles to social-political issues. God is not a Republican or a Democrat – He is the Founder of a Kingdom based on His Son and His Truths.

Today, our nation and the nations are in crisis on multiple levels. The reason is simple: our citizens and leaders are either ignorant of the Scriptures as they apply to social-political-economic issues or are not capable of mobilizing others to educate and apply them. So how can we Believers “disciple nations?” We can’t until we are aware of the biblical applications of the Scriptures to changing social systems.

SECTION THREE: THE STATESMEN PROJECT FOCUS GROUPS

Successfully navigating our nations out of the crises requires statesmen who can lead us to shared transcendent values, principle-based governance and a citizenry educated and motivated to recognize and elect leaders who advocate and embody those principles. The Statesmen Project is not so much attempting to create new things as much as identifying the principles that have proven to work best and creating paths of synergy between people and groups already applying these principles.

We have organized ourselves into Focus Groups. When someone wishes to begin to participate in and connect to the work of The Statesmen Project we suggest that they follow their passion into one of the following Focus Groups:

- Community Transformation
 - Ecclesia Prayer
 - City Action Councils
 - Citizen Education
- Public Policy
 - Banking and Currency
- Intercessory Prayer
- Communication and Media

Below are descriptions and overviews of the Focus Groups.

COMMUNITY TRANSFORMATION FOCUS GROUPS

Communities are transformed not by mass systems but rather one person and one family unit at a time. Nations are transformed by one community at a time. As such, the Community Transformation Focus Group seeks to partner with and help prepare disciples of Christ who are willing to respond in loving action to the social needs and crises of our communities.

The Community Transformation Focus Group believes that there are three essential elements to effective, sustainable principle-based community transformation:

- Ecclesia Prayer
- City Action Councils
- Citizen Education

We are now prepared to consult with communities and offer specific methodology, manuals, and expertise on these essential elements of community transformation.

Ecclesia Prayer

The Statesmen Project has been sensing for a while that The Holy Spirit has begun to emphasize the role of Kingdom citizens to function as a governing body to legislate God's will onto the earth: to "bind on earth what is bound in heaven and to loose on earth what is loosed in heaven." We believe that a new season is dawning for the Body of Christ to understand and start to act in this role. Jesus taught his disciples to pray for the Father's will to be done on earth as it is in heaven. Acting as an "ecclesia" is one of the models Jesus said should be used by his followers to make that happen.

In Matthew 16:18, Jesus stated that He would build His "church". The word translated "church" is the Greek word ecclesia, which has both a Greek and Hebrew background. It is a combination of two Greek words: ek, 'out of,' and klesis, 'a calling' (from kaleo, 'to call'). In Deuteronomy 9:10 and 18:16, the Greek Septuagint translates qahal, which comes from a root that means 'to summon', as the Hebrew equivalent of ecclesia; and both passages reference a called out people at Sinai assembled to receive God's law and to act upon it. Both qahal and ecclesia describe a summoned, redeemed people called into an assembly and granted authority to accomplish the business of heaven on the earth.

Of the approximately eighty passages in which the term ecclesia occurs in the New Testament, fifty-seven have in view the church as an assembly in a particular place or specific geographical location. Each territory has elders, which are those citizens with clear authority and standing in their city/state, and local congregations within those cities that have been set there by God.

An ecclesia convocation expresses its authority first in prayer. In that role, the local ecclesia is summoned to come before the Lord and agree with what the Lord is doing and release it (loose) in the earth or prohibit (bind) what the enemy is seeking to do in the earth. An ecclesia convocation is a divinely ordained body, appointed to stand at the 'gates' and permit or deny through legislative proclamation and agreement. As such, the Statesmen Project has chosen to call the group that focuses on the prayer aspect of community transformation by the term Ecclesia Prayer. The primary role of the Ecclesia Prayer group is to consult with communities who would like to create this function locally, starting with an assembly or convocation.

The Statesmen Project Ecclesia Prayer group team members partner with local area leaders to prepare for and to conduct an Ecclesia Convocation. Local disciples are trained in how to pray from the perspective of a spiritual governing body in order to influence the community towards acting in God's will on key local issues. Examples of key local issues could be anything: growing gang violence, racism and local law enforcement, local Muslim communities and refugees, minimum wage rates, how to prepare for droughts or floods, affordable housing, loss of businesses in the region/rising unemployment, etc. These disciples are then gathered periodically into convocation to pray concerning these issues.

Prior to the convocations, there is research prepared for all participants to read and mediate on:

- Accurate, factual descriptions on the issue

- What the Bible may say on that or similar issues, and
- What other scriptures might apply for understanding God's will on the issue

To create unity in the convocation all participants declare in unison three prepared documents:

1. A statement of faith consistent with both evangelical and reformed views
2. The historic Apostles' Creed
3. A confession about the efficacy of the blood of Jesus

The agreement and unity formulated around these documents is considered by all to serve as each member's qualification to be a participating delegate of that Ecclesia. During the Convocation, scriptures that had been previously organized into biblically-based categories are read before the assembly and then prayed. The scripture-based prayers are released in the methods of proclamations, declarations, and decrees rather than in the forms of intercession and petition. As each Ecclesia member stands in his or her God-granted authority, the governmental aspect of the church is demonstrated.

The Ecclesia Prayer Focus Group has created a manual for creating local Ecclesia Prayer Convocations. The manual includes:

1. Definitions and The Vision
 - a. The Ecclesia Defined
 - b. The Statesmen Project Defined
 - c. The Purpose and Vision of City-Wide Ecclesia Convocations
 - d. What is "Affirmation-Based Prayer"?
2. The Participants of The Ecclesia Prayer Convocation
 - a. The Leaders of The City As "Assigned Citizens"
 - b. The Ecclesia Advisors Team
 - c. The Citizens and Observers
3. The Convocations and The Protocols
 - a. The General Format
 - b. The Convocations Protocols
 - c. Formalities and Credentials
 - d. Petitions Before Spiritual Authorities
 - e. The Stated Intentions
 - f. Scriptural Affirmations
 - g. Prayer for The Land, Leaders and Key Issues
 - h. Summaries, Affirmations and Petitions
4. Sustainable Growth and Relationships
 - a. Holding Ground and Gaining New Ground

- b. The Relational Politics Within and Without
- c. Getting Connected to The Nations

The Ecclesia Prayer Convocation manual is part of the consulting we provide to our Community Transformation clients.

City Action Councils

One of the most important governing principles The Statesmen Project holds to is the principle of what we call “localism.” Localism is a catch-word carrying multiple key concepts. The first concept is that decision-making and policy implementations are usually best made by those close to a place and people most directly affected by the policy. The second concept, centralization, with its usual bureaucratic encumbrances, duplications, and inefficiencies, must be very carefully created and managed. Third, community transformation is like individual transformation, it comes from within that community – not imposed upon it - and regional or national transformation starts in local communities. Finally, to be sustained, justice, peace and economic prosperity must be done through community governing itself.

City Action Councils are voluntary, relationally based groups of citizens coming together from within communities to strategically serve their community through united, public + private sector alliances with civil leaders and other service-based organizations. As local tax bases are hard-pressed to fund even essential social services, City Action Council-type service organizations become ever more necessary to both “fill in the cities’ unfunded needs,” care for the marginalized, and stimulate citizen investment in place of always defaulting to “the government will do this for us.” If freedom begins in self-government, community begins with an activated and caring citizenry.

The Statesmen Project believes that community transformation is an obvious necessity in virtually all the nations of the world. As globalization increases, our cities become increasingly challenged to adequately fund and effectively manage. The Statesmen Project’s purpose is to serve and “disciple nations,” as Christ’s Great Commission of Matthew 28:18-210 mandates. Our strategy is two-tiered: Firstly, to help undergird local communities with prayer, citizen education, and service-based private-sector government alliances (City Action Councils), and secondly, with principle-based public policy. City Action Councils, in concert with effective prayer bases and citizen education projects, are the “three-fold cords” of our practical application of the principle of localism in action.

Currently we are working to find leaders within cities who are already building out these kind of service-based networks and seek to connect them with other leaders in other cities doing similar things. As we continue to find them, we connect them together for mutual benefits, strategies, and encouragement.

Citizen Education

As a result of the political gridlock of most Western countries, most citizens have become discouraged that leaders can do anything to fix the problems. Citizens are becoming increasingly apathetic and ignorant. They are losing their ability to evaluate and think clearly, to choose wisely “based on principles that will affect the greater good of the nation, and to elect officials who can lead for the betterment of their jurisdiction instead of for re-election. A lack of understanding of the issues has rendered many helpless to do anything in the face of seeming insurmountable challenges. It is precisely these concerned citizens who want answers that The Statesmen Project seeks to help. By providing more than just useful information, The Statesman Project is seeking to help people build effective solution strategies for their own lives and their communities.

We are addressing this directly because we believe that:

- An uninformed citizenry is susceptible to political and economic anarchy and/or tyranny.
- An informed citizenry provides nations with key innovators, educators, and entrepreneurs that are vital to national recovery.
- An informed citizenry is key to an intellectual development process that enables citizens to grow in possess relevant knowledge in order to become more capable of applying strategic wisdom.
- An informed citizenry is key to a skills development process that enables citizens to grow in their strategic planning, communication, and leadership capabilities.

The Statesmen Project has created its first has created its first course, Citizen Education 101 Discipling Nations: Preparing to Obey the Great Commission. The course is designed specifically to help citizens become more effective in recognizing the root to economic and social challenges that must be understood so that principled solutions can be more effectively applied.

The contents of the course include:

- Lesson 1: Discipling Nations and the Great Commission
- Lesson 2: Principle-Based Public Policy: Ten Master Principles
- Lesson 3: Worldview and Social Structure: What Holds Us Together
- Lesson 4: Transcendence, Self-Government and Service-Based Power
- Lesson 5: The Nuclear Family, Jurisdictional Government and Localism
- Lesson 6: Limits, Justice-Equality and Results-Based Reality
- Lesson 7: The Bridge of Trust Holds It All Together
- Lesson 8: How Do We Fix The Broken System?
- Recommended Resources for Further Study

The Statesmen Project plans to develop more courses on the Biblical approach to social issues to educate and equip citizens to provide the leadership necessary to practically respond to the current crises in their communities and nation. Future courses will focus on key themes, including: the nature of power and how it is shifting in present society, the causes and consequences of the broken political system, why the economic crisis is not over, and why enhancing our capability to make effective personal and corporate strategic choices is the only means by which we will accomplish the essential outcomes that contribute toward national renewal.

The educational philosophy that is applied to the design of our courses has, at its core, the belief that adult education is about enabling a developmental process for participants in two key areas:

1. Growing intellectually through possessing knowledge and then applying wisdom.
2. Developing greater capability to use their skills to accomplish their strategic goals.

Lectures, discussions, podcasts, forums, video casts, reading materials will be provided through a secure online education service. The Statesmen Project is also researching how its content could be provided as a series of professional development certificates for those that are looking for adult education in order to further their own career objectives.

We hope that local leaders working towards community transformation will find Citizen Education 101 and future courses from The Statesmen Project to be valuable. We plan to work closely with local leaders to develop courses that best enable citizens to think using Biblical principles and to apply wisdom, rooted in love, to lead their communities towards freedom, sustainable prosperity and justice.

PUBLIC POLICY FOCUS GROUPS

In addition to focusing our efforts to support local community transformation The Statesmen Project also has focus groups working on delivering principle-based ideas for national public policy. There are many national issues to choose from: terrorism/national security, availability and affordability of healthcare, immigration, unemployment/economic growth, income and wealth distribution, the Social Security system, national debt/currency/banking policy, crime and violence, environment/global warming, race relations, etc.

Banking and Currency

Economics, as most of us know, is the systematic organization, on a large scale, of the collective effects of people's labor, purchases, and investments as they function in the context and support of the community or nations surrounding them. Whoever controls economic policy largely controls the nation or nations for good or ill. Economic policy is an attempt to both manage and stabilize the collective effects of man's labor in alignment with the values forming the society in which that labor is performed. Economic policy, from a human point of view, is the primary tool of "taking dominion" since virtually all human activity is supported by economic transactions.

Economic policy especially deals with controls over currency, banking, interest rates, taxation policies and government expenditures. Economic policy both forms and drives political parties and the political process. One of those key economic policy issues is what is commonly called “entitlements”. Entitlements deal with the financial support systems organized and managed by civil government as it attempts to care for its citizens in terms of housing, taxation policy, health care, retirement, unemployment and related insurance systems of support. Entitlements take us directly into a host of value questions such as who should pay for them, what are the appropriate costs for them, and how are they best managed so as to cover true human need without creating undue dependency in the people receiving them upon the institutions providing them? Because these kinds of value propositions are so critical to a nation’s economic health, and the financial systems undergirding the labor and lifestyle of the entire population, The Statesmen Project has chosen to initially focus on them.

The participants in The Statesmen Project Banking and Currency focus group are deeply concerned over our current monetary system. Our concern is a money system based on debt instead of value. For example, when a private bank makes a loan to an individual or company the money constituting that loan does not come from previous savers but instead is created ex nihilo for that particular loan. The fact that the general population does not understand this, but instead thinks that banks simply intermediate funds from savers to borrowers, creates a deception of gigantic proportions.

In our present system, an increase in money always demands an increase in debt. This means therefore that a country that has more money must also have more total debt (i.e., governmental and private combined). Excess debt has been, and always will be, a permanent drain on the productive capacity of individuals as well as nations. Our present system thus requires the perpetuation of debt on such a scale that it threatens the very fabric of society. It therefore stands in direct opposition to the principles that should be inherent in any monetary system. Any such system is prima facie evidence as untrustworthy, unethical, and unjust.

The solution is a monetary system that primarily benefits society. For the generally accepted properties of money (medium of exchange, unit of account, store of value, and standard of deferred payments) to function properly, the monetary system in which money is issued and circulates through the economy must adhere to the fundamental principles of honesty, integrity, and justice. Such a system creates trust between the people using the system and those administering it. It provides a foundation upon which prosperity is available to all and inter-generational momentum can be built and sustained.

It is in the best interest of society to insure these fundamental principles are endemic to a monetary system, and as such a system devoid of these principles will ultimately be a deterrent to freedom and general prosperity.

The Statesmen Project Banking and Currency Focus Group is advocating a systemic change coming from citizen understanding and action. The Statesmen Project seeks to build education programs and content that will enable concerned citizens to be better equipped to understand the foundational principles of a functional monetary system and the realities of our present system. Through written materials, conferences, and videos, The Statesmen Project will train its audience to parse news, analyses, and broad popular reactions regarding money and banking in a way that deepens comprehension and enables proper application of these foundational principles.

Education alone will not generate needed reform. We will move to foster action on the part of our audience. This is not partisan action with respect to any political party, but rather in favor of the principles outlined above: that is monetary systems must be honest, ethical, and just. They must serve the needs of the people and protect their opportunity to prosper and sustain generational momentum.

Our strategy is that incremental change can lead to systemic change. Our goal is to see the complete monetary and banking system changed so that monetary systems harness a nation's productive potential and minimize human manipulation of our money supply resulting in concentrating gains in the hand of a few and supporting government largesse. We realize that there will always be a measure of imperfection in whatever system is devised, but the goal is to minimize that imperfection.

The Statesmen Project believes that the probability of a complete systemic change under our current political impasse is a near impossibility. We are attempting, therefore, to devise incremental changes which would:

- (a) Systematically over time demonstrate new and sustainable ways of managing our monetary system;
- (b) benefit the people in the process;
- (c) leave room for new and innovative thinking, and;
- (d) not concern existing power centers to the degree they seek to stop the process.

Our approach is to coordinate with like-minded partners. There are many economists, bloggers, speakers, and other public figures who hold views very similar to our own. Our intent is not to act as a clearing house for these, but to do what we can to direct them toward the promotion and adoption of relevant principles. Too often many of us run in our own circles of like-minded people and forget that other people may have valid ideas on how to practically incorporate these principles. We are trying to raise the bar to create a common awareness of these principles and foster cooperation in deploying them to solve the urgent problems of our day.

Action items for the Banking and Currency Focus Group in 2016:

1. Create a comprehensive list of major political, church, and business leaders who are behind The Statesmen Project banking and currency policy initiatives.
2. Continue to develop and broaden strategic relationships with leadership in the academic, church, state, and Federal governments.

3. Initiate an education campaign directed at those leaders as well as key segments of the broader population.
4. Move each constituency in #2 above toward alignment on messaging and strategy to incorporate key principles within monetary policy.
5. Identify and foster early adoption of non-legislative alternatives.
6. Strategically define the first tier increment of proposed alternatives that require legislative action for long term adoption.
7. Create emergency legislation crafted for state, local, and Federal government to implement in the event of a major financial/currency crisis.
8. Create a communication structure by which emergency activities may be developed and coordinated.

In 2017 we plan to:

1. Have the network involved with The Statesmen Project Banking and Currency Focus Group coordinated and active in all spheres of influence: state, local, and Federal governments, as well as academia and the church.
2. Continue to broaden the relationship base within governments and the church.
3. First tier increment of proposed alternatives actively moving through the legislative process and measurable increase of adoption of non-legislative alternatives.
4. Second tier increment of proposed alternatives that require legislation strategically defined and legislation crafted.
5. Second tier increment of proposed alternatives that do not require legislation identified and an early adoption program begun.

INTERCESSORY PRAYER FOCUS GROUP

Prayer is the foundation of all authentic relationship with God. God's will is revealed in the Holy Bible and praying from a grateful, humble, and trusting heart is the primary means through which we know God genuinely, understand His ways accurately, and execute His will effectively.

The Intercessory Prayer focus group's purpose is to serve The Statesmen Project by praying for all it's various endeavors and learning how to do that with increasing effectiveness, verifiable results, conspicuous honor to The Lord, and substantial benefits to people and communities.

The Intercessory Prayer Group's core beliefs:

- The Almighty God, as creator of all things, is ultimate reality, and is therefore eternally relevant (Romans 11:36 - Transcendent Values).
- God mandates and privileges us to be the instruments through which He accomplishes His will in the earth. Prayer is the most reasonable response to that opportunity. His will includes blessing individuals with gifts, growth, and responsibility as well as blessing communities through service (The One and the Many).

- Jesus came to destroy the works of the devil (1 John 3:8). These works of the evil one are set against The Lord and the people He wants to bless. We can powerfully oppose the enemy's schemes by discovering and implementing The Lord's strategies in prayer (Matthew 16:18, Ephesians 3:10,11).

The Intercessory Prayer Group's specific objectives:

- To identify, form, and train teams if Intercessory for each focus group in The Statesmen Project. These teams will carry the primary prayer responsibility for their specific group.
- To identify and properly connect with other intercession ministries with whom we have strong harmony in purpose, perspective, and priority.
- To produce 2 training courses for Intercessory teams that involve 'foundations of prayer' and strategic intercession.

Tactically, we plan to:

- Establish and maintain all related communication for The Statesmen Project through the website.
- The monthly prayer conference calls will be the practical base from which we maintain our Intercessory responsibilities, encouragement, and personal updates.

COMMUNICATIONS AND MEDIA FOCUS GROUP

The Communications and Media focus group's purpose is to serve The Statesmen Project by writing and editing the written communications and using the Internet and other media to broadcast the content. Communications and Media focus group is responsible for building and maintaining the website, written and video content, and the use of all social media.

SECTION FOUR:

HOW YOU CAN GET INVOLVED

INDIVIDUAL ENGAGEMENT

For many of us, we have determined that we must engage and that engagement must be intentional, strategic and results-driven. We have committed to do so. We are already too involved in other important endeavors to waste precious time. We want to make a difference with others who want to make a difference. The scale of the changes and transformation for cultures and nations we seek is huge and we acknowledge that. Yet, we believe God, working through people at the right time in history, has always made the difference. For us, though technology and other modern innovations have proven as culturally disruptive as they are scientifically profound, the only change that lasts must be built on truths that don't change.

The Statesmen Project is only three years old. Nevertheless, many of us have already spent a lifetime preparing for and dealing with the core social and political-economic issues required to lay the proper foundations for the Project. We are not strangers to the complexities of political-economic issues and conflicting theories as to how to build sustainable communities, societies that promote and experience justice, and the preserving of individual liberty in the context of inequities. What we are after is a commitment to not function as merely "political" or do "politics as usual;" we want to influence and press for the emergence of true statesmen and women to make real differences. If you are driven by the same passion, welcome.

The Statesmen Project meetings are usually offered by invitation only whereby a current participant invites a friend to attend with them. If the guest desires to explore getting involved, they are invited to contact a leader of one of our Focus Groups and then explore their involvement there. There is no formal membership; The Statesmen Project is designed to revolve around committed relationships held together by a common passion to bring about social transformation.
